Molecular profiling from Caris Life Sciences® (Caris) assesses cancer markers found in your tumor or blood to help your health care team develop a treatment plan that is specific to you. As part of your testing, your blood sample(s) and/or tumor sample(s) will be sent to Caris, where your sample, and DNA and RNA extracted from your sample, will be analyzed, producing genomic information. Caris will report your test results to the physician who ordered your test and to other health care providers requested by your treatment team. Test results may indicate that the markers being tested for are or are not present in your sample and may identify other characteristics of your cancer. Your test results are available from your physician, or from Caris upon written request as allowed by law.
